A Dianic, Womyn-only Goddess Temple dedicated in the Spirit of Aloha to the preservation, perpetuation and promotion of Goddess culture, public ceremony, ritual and Womyn's Mysteries.

I hele i kauhale, pa'a pu'olo i ka lima.

In going to the house of others, take a package in hand.

A ritual or ceremonial gift is given to nurture the relationship between giver & receiver in return for Mana ~ Spiritual Energy.

Our Temple is founded upon the traditions of Hawai'i; it is the heart of what we are. Ho'okupu is a traditional protocol among the Kanaka Maoli 'O Hawai'i (Indigenous people of Hawai'i) that is dictated by hō'ihi (respect) for the host, land, ancestors or gods. It establishes a connection between the giver and the receiver that is culturally appropriate. We practice this tradition in our Temple.

Recently, we made a pilgrimage to the Orange County Goddess Temple; to share, to connect, to share ritual ~ 8 womyn taking time to journey. We arrived early Saturday afternoon to prepare; creating the beautiful altar in the ritual room. Our sacred drumming signaled the beginning of the ritual. As the womyn entered the room they joined my sisters dancing around the altar, swaying, spinning, and smiling; flowing into the space to the rhythms of the drum. The circle was cast and we came together, both Temples as one, around the altar, connecting with the rhythmic energy. To the altar the womyn approached, kneeling or standing to give their prayers. Our Priestess approached and placed upon their shoulders a sacred snake skin imbued with the transformational healing of the animal. We then danced around the altar giving thanks for the gifts; chanting and connecting. And so the evening ritual concluded. We stayed the night in the Temple, held with love by the huge Sekhmet statue and large picture of our Queen Lili'uokalani. They smiled down upon us. The next morning we prepared to attend OCGT's Sunday service and in this ritual several womyn from our Temple approached Ava, High Priestess of OCGT and offered her the gifts we gathered ~ candles, incense, charcoal, TP, and many other things. Surprise showed on the face of our hostess and her Initiates/Priestesses. Our offerings were unexpected. And so we teach through our actions what Ho'okupu means, and we continue to teach about the gifts that we have learned from our Hawaiian foundation

Aloha Daughters of the Goddess,

Many blessings to all of you. This Summer, I had the honor of taking my youngest daughter Eden to the Iolani Palace on O'ahu, Hawai'i. I had been there with my eldest daughter Jade in 2008 with the Huaka'i journey we took with our Kumu Patrick and Hula Halau. The palace was built by King Kalakaua in the late 1800's and was a place of diplomatic, cultural, and political pride. The palace also became a place of discord when the United States began its illegal and continual occupation of the Hawaiian Nation and held the King's sister and successor to the throne, Queen Lili'uokalani, prisoner within the palace walls.

Being in the palace is always a very profound experience for me and I am taken back to a time and place where our Hawaiian culture was honored and revered. As Eden and I made our way through the many rooms and halls with Koa wood floors and carvings, I came across a written plaque with the Hawaiian proverb we are using at the top of this newsletter. I thought it relevant as part of the teaching, to bring an exchange for ritual and ceremony to help educate those who might not have had the same upbringing or understanding of Aloha that I have been gifted with in my lifetime. The saying is deeper than simply bringing a 'hostess gift' when you go to someone's house. It encourages us to always bring something of significance when we visit another's home, temple, ceremony or gathering. Offerings such as these are ideally something of deep worth, meaning or significance, and will continue to bring forth prosperity and spiritual mana and energy to those being given to. Such acts of grace and aloha, are offerings of gratitude/mahalo, as well as an energetic exchange for the gifts/mana/offerings received during the visit/ritual.

To me this energy is also connected to ongoing things I support and give myself to. The offering of the new book Luisah Teish and I have written: On Holy Ground: Commitment and Devotion to Sacred Lands which is now available through the website is such an example. The pictures from the front and back cover are designed by my daughter Eden and were taken by me while on sacred pilgrimage to Hawai'i. Within the covers, more offerings and stories are shared for our readers to learn more about how to love the land more deeply/Aloha Aina from both a Hawaiian and an African perspective.

How do we continue to let Aloha and Grace be the victorious energies that we embody and perpetuate? It is very important to remember to give and to offer from a place of empowerment, not from victimhood or martyrdom. We do this by offering our Ho'okupu from the heart, because from this place it has the power and beauty of the rainbow, the blessings of the moon and the healing power of the Hawaiian beaches and waters. Open yourself to a life of drinking deeply of wisdom and Aloha and I hope we will be blessed by being in circle together.

Aloha,

Leilani
